

- Products & human purpose

A better morning for the bakery.

An imagined AI planner can produce schedules. What kind of morning should those schedules help create?

A proposed product-design example.

- Products & human purpose

Less left over.
Enough when people arrive.

Avoiding unsold bread and keeping a favorite loaf available later can invite different production choices.

Left over

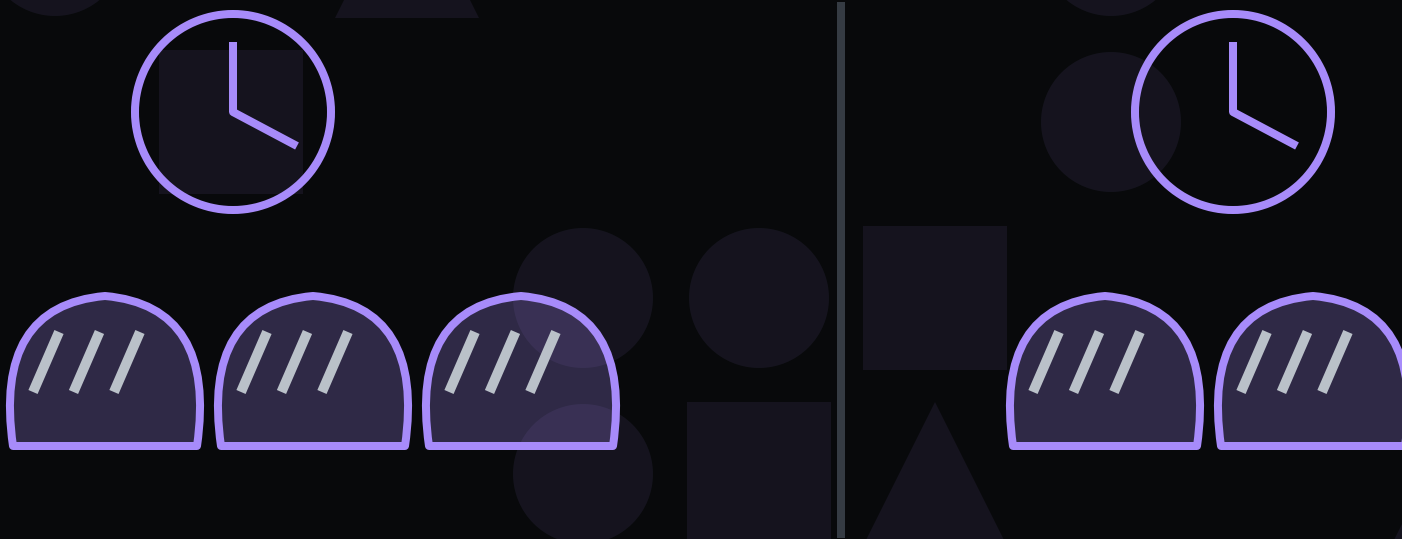

Available later

Both concerns belong in the brief.

- Products & human purpose

Make the consequences visible.

An earlier bake, a later batch and a different workload give the baker real alternatives to discuss.

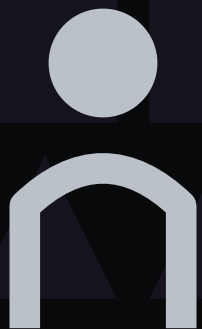

Illustrative choices, not a forecast.

- Products & human purpose

The decision is part of the product.

The useful service helps the baker understand and choose among the consequences, then prepare the work.

Activity needs a human purpose.

- Products & human purpose

Would this make the morning better?

That question belongs at the counter, with the people doing the work and the customers who came for bread.

